OUR DAILY DREAD

HI. You found the first issue of a queer magazine in a city that keeps telling us it doesn’t have one. Kelowna has queer history, queer kids, queer elders, queer bakers and bureaucrats – what it hasn’t had is paper that says so out loud.

This issue is about collapse: the orchards, the venues, the rent math, the bridge traffic. Not because we’re doomers, but because things fall apart here on schedule, and naming the schedule is the first act of repair.

Rip out the poster. Colour the cartoon. Mail us your fury and your recipes. This thing only works if you get crumbs on it.

BEFORE THE BRIDGE

This valley did not begin in 1892, and it will not end with the condo towers. A short, rude history of what was here, what got built on top of it, and what collapsed first.

WORDS: STAFF · PHOTOS: CITY OF KELOWNA ARCHIVES

FIG. 1 – CAPTION SETS THE JOKE, THE IMAGE SETS THE SCENE.

FOR thousands of years before a single orchard row was staked, this was – and remains – unceded syilx Okanagan territory. The lake fed people. The grasslands were managed with fire, on purpose, by people who understood the valley as a system rather than a view. Then came the fur posts, the mission, and in 1892 a townsite plat with straight lines drawn over everything. The sales pitch was permanent abundance: apples forever, sun forever, growth forever.

01 · HISTORY

FIG. 1 – THE FLOATING BRIDGE, 1958. TRAFFIC ARRIVED; THE FERRY DIED THE SAME DAY.

Every boom since has made the same promise, and every bust has been treated as a surprise. Fruit prices collapsed. Sawmills closed. The 2003 firestorm ate 239 homes while the city watched from the beach. This issue asks the impolite question: what if collapse isn't the exception here – what if it's the business model? The ledger two pages over has the receipts.

FIG. 2 – PICKING CREWS, RUTLAND BENCHES. THE APPLES WERE A PYRAMID SCHEME WITH ROOTS.

The valley sold itself twice: first as Eden, then as equity. Fruit ranchers went broke so often the packinghouses printed their own scrip; when fruit died, the pitch became retirement sun; when the retirees priced out the pickers, the pitch became lakeside lofts.

Each act ended the same way – with the people who did the work living further from the water. The queer history is braided through all of it: dance halls with unofficial nights, friendship networks that doubled as housing lists, a scene that survived by being useful and quiet until it didn’t have to be.

CRITERION-SHELF DEEP CUTS

Old films, screened like they matter – because a town with no rep cinema deserves one anyway. Each issue: three from the queer canon, then we show them outside. Program notes below; lawn chairs next page.

#1 PROGRAM / NOTES	35MM ENERGY, DIGITAL BUDGET
Paris Is Burning (1990) – The ballroom documentary that gave the culture its vocabulary. Watch it with people; the applause is part of the text.
My Own Private Idaho (1991) – River Phoenix falls asleep on every road in the Northwest. The campfire scene alone is worth the mosquitoes.
The Watermelon Woman (1996) – Cheryl Dunye invents an archive because nobody kept one for her. Relevant to a magazine doing the same thing.

NOBODY MY AGE CAN AFFORD TO STAY

I work two jobs and split a two-bedroom with three people, and I’m the success story. My group chat is a slow-motion goodbye party: Vernon, Calgary, mom’s basement in Surrey. Every viewing is forty people deep and one of them is always crying.

The city calls it a “supply challenge.” From down here it looks simpler: the people who own Kelowna decided the people who run Kelowna’s espresso machines should live somewhere else. I’m not asking for a condo. I’m asking to stay in the postal code where my life happens.

“Every viewing is forty people deep and one of them is always crying.”

UNREVIEWED. UNEDITED. CORRECT. — THE YV DESK PROMISE

OUT AT THE PACKINGHOUSE

I came out at a bush party in Glenmore and the worst thing that happened was a guy named Tyler said “cool” and asked if I could drive him home. That’s the Kelowna nobody writes about: not paradise, not hell – just a small city learning faster than its city council.

The hard part isn’t hate. It’s geography. When the nearest queer bar is a five-hour drive, your community is whoever shows up to the lake at golden hour. So we built our own calendar. It’s on page 38. Show up.

My childhood photos are sorted by smoke year. We packed the car in 2021 and again in 2023, and both times the adults on the radio called it unprecedented. It has precedent. I am the precedent.

Here’s my ask, and it’s small: stop telling my generation to be resilient while approving hillside subdivisions with one road out. Resilience is what you demand from people after you’ve decided not to protect them.

Full disclosure, printed large: this magazine is funded by Riposte Laboratories, a Kelowna outfit that counter-attacks waste — recycled-plastic injection molding and reclaimed-cell modular power. We share what we’re building here, in the same pages, at the same volume as everyone else.

The deal, in writing: the Lab pays the printer and gets two pages. The editors answer to readers, not the funder. If that ever changes, the colouring page will let you know.

FORTY YEARS OF NERVE

portrait — Miss Demeanour in full regalia, backstage

FIG. 7 — “MISS DEMEANOUR,” PERFORMING SINCE 1986. HAIR BY GRAVITY DEFIANCE.

“We didn’t have a bar, darling. We had basements, and we had nerve.”

On the dock she found the offerings the winter had rearranged: a doll’s shoe, a fishing licence from 1974, a phone in a sandwich bag, screen up, one notification still glowing like a lure. The lake was flat as a ledger. June, who had moved back for the cheap rent that no longer existed and the family that barely did, rolled her jeans and stepped down onto the first cold plank.

“Okay,” she told the water, the town, the whole arranged marriage of valley and debt. “Show me what you kept.”

SHORT FICTION

THE LAKE TAKES

Trying to find queer-competent healthcare in the Central Okanagan is a part-time job with no benefits. We phoned every clinic so you don’t have to.

BY [AUTHOR] · ILLUSTRATION OPEN CALL

The realtor said the house had lake access, and it did, the way a mouth has throat access. June found the stairs behind the lilac on the second day – forty-one steps of split cedar going down to a dock that wasn’t in the listing photos, because docks that old don’t photograph, they testify.

Her grandmother had warned her about the lake in the language June only half-kept: it gives, but it keeps receipts. Every family on the bench had a story with the same shape – a ring, a brother, a hayfork, a name – something the water accepted and never gave back at the same size.

Serialized fiction runs across issues. Miss one and the lake keeps your bookmark.

DB You started performing here in 1986. What’s actually changed?

MD The audience got younger and the rent got meaner. In ’86 the danger was people; now the danger is landlords. I know which fight I prefer – you can charm people.

DB Where did everyone go when the venues closed?

MD Nowhere, sweetheart. That’s the secret. We’re all still here – we just meet in gymnasiums and orchards and each other’s kitchens. A scene isn’t an address.

DB Advice for the seventeen-year-olds reading this?

MD Learn to sew, learn to drive, and never let a city tell you it doesn’t contain you. It does. It always did.

MD, CONTINUED:

People ask if I’m bitter about the decades in basements. Bitter? Those basements had better sound systems than half the clubs I’ve played since. We recorded everything on cassette. Someone’s nephew digitized it all last winter and I cried for a week. That’s your history project right there – a drag queen’s shoebox. The city archive called ME. I said darling, you’re forty years late and you’re paying for the shelving. They did. Progress is slow, then it’s sudden, then it sends an invoice.

The fix isn’t mysterious: fund the clinic, train the staff, shorten the triangle. Cities that did it saw waits drop within two budget cycles. Ours pilots a task force instead. We’ll print the task force’s org chart when it produces one – the colouring page may get a sequel.
